ARTISTIC PROFILE

Alexandre Rabinovitch-Barakovsky
Composer, Incantations

Rabinovitch-Barakovsky was born in Russia after World War II in 1945. He studied composition at the Moscow Conservatory from 1963 to 1967 under Dmitry Kabalevsky and Alexandre Pirumov. In 1974 Rabinovitch-Barakovsky emigrated to the West and since 1980 has lived in Switzerland. Says Rabinovitch-Barakovsky, “At present, unlike my previous good choice of birth timing, I have no idea how to escape World War III, another Fukushima or lack of musical inspiration.”

His main works - orchestral and chamber music - are part of a global work-in-progress called "Anthology of Archaic Rituals-In Search of the Center." His credo is elementary: "Let the heart think" - quite a different approach compared with the legacy of the Seconda Pratica (17-20 centuries), which is "let the heart express itself." He conceives his works as sort of musical promenades through various cultural traditions of the past: Buddhist ("6 Intermediary States" for orchestra, based on the "Tibetan Book of the Dead"), Tantric, Taoist, Christian, Aboriginal, Jewish, Hinduist, Celtic, and Alchemical ("Opus Magnum" for orchestra, written in 2010).

Rabinovitch-Barakovsky has performed concerts as a pianist and later as a conductor. He says, “Thanks to these inoffensive activities I still remain alive.” He made many recordings for the now defunct Teldec Classics, as well as for EMI Classics. As a composer, his works are published by Megadisc Classics, Valois, Bis and VDE GALLO.

Rabinovitch-Barakovsky is an avid reader, most recently enjoying "The Lost Symbol" by Dan Brown, "The Lucifer Principle" by Howard Bloom and "The Source Field" by David Wilcock. Inspired by this book he has recently composed the "Source Field" for orchestra in two movements: Space-Time and Time-Space.
